

Five Factor Nonverbal Personality Questionnaire (FF-NPQ)

Report for:

Sam Sample
Male
January 8, 2019

Introduction

The FF-NPQ was designed to assess personal qualities in terms of a selected number of traits which describe all people to varying degrees. The development of these measures was the result of many years of careful research, systematic investigation, and the accumulation of data from hundreds of people.

This report is based on the responses you made when completing the FF-NPQ. Your scores show how you compare with other people in terms of the characteristics measured by the FF-NPQ. Your unique pattern of high and low scores differentiates you from other individuals. An examination of this pattern may act as a guide to understanding the impact of personal characteristics on work and job satisfaction and on aspects of your daily life.

There are no right or wrong answers to the FF-NPQ, nor is one particular pattern of scores necessarily better than another. The FFNPQ was not designed to focus on character flaws or deviance, or to highlight maladjustment. Rather, the FF-NPQ simply describes one's characteristics on a number of common traits that reflect certain consistencies in the way one is likely to behave in a wide variety of situations. While FF-NPQ scores can be a valuable tool in personal awareness, results provide only a partial description of your behavior.

A great deal of developmental work went into the FF-NPQ and it is widely respected as a reliable assessment device, but it is important to recognize that no such measure will be one hundred percent accurate. You should evaluate these results in light of all available information.

Your FF-NPQ report is divided into two sections. On the next page, you will find a profile of your FF-NPQ scores. Following pages contain descriptions of the FF-NPQ scales.
